In Person: Activities of Daily Living (ADLs)

KADL Activities of Daily Living (ADLs) Module

OVERVIEW

Although new to the 2011 collection wave, the Activities of Daily Living (ADLs) Module expands upon questions first asked during the 1994 telephone interview, when participants were prompted to report on their experiences receiving personal care from a family member or friend. Originally asked within the Caregiving Module, which primarily focused on the participant's experiences as a provider of care, questions about receiving care were moved to the Health Module for the 2005 collection wave before being reconstituted as the Activities of Daily Living Module in 2011. Far more detailed and expansive than what has been administered in previous waves, the 2011 rendition of questions construed "care" as requiring help with particular daily activities and allowed participants to name multiple helpers across two distinct activity categories. For the first of these, basic activities of daily living (BADLs), participants were allowed to report on up to three people who help them with the following self-care tasks: dressing; walking across a room; bathing or showering; eating; getting in or out of bed; and using the toilet. For the second category, instrumental activities of daily living (IADLs), participants were allowed to report on up to five people who help them with higher-order tasks necessary to living independently: using a map to figure out how to get around in a strange place; preparing a hot meal; shopping for groceries; making phone calls; taking medications; doing housework or yardwork; and managing money. When addressing each activity of daily living, participants were asked whether they have any difficulty performing it due to a health or memory problem and, if so, whether anyone ever helps them with it; if a helper was mentioned, participants were also asked how long they have been receiving help. The following information was then recorded for each of the participant's helpers: the person's relationship to them; the number of days in the past month the person provided help, as well as the average hours of help provided per occurrence; and how far away the person lives. Data users should note that there was often overlap between the people named as helpers with BADLs and IADLs.

Note: For many cases a participant's spouse or other family member was present during the interview. This sometimes resulted in the participant relying on the other person for help in answering some or many of the questions. At the end of each module the interviewer indicated the amount of help the participant received and who provided that help. That assessment is covered by codes 1 through 5. Additionally, a code of 7 indicates that the entire interview was administered to a proxy while a code of 6 indicates that this particular module was answered by a proxy but other modules were answered by the participant.

Note: If this module was administered via proxy or if the participant received help answering the questions in this module then we record the relationship of the proxy/helper to the participant. Although most participants relied on only one helper or proxy for the interview, some had more than one. Thus the value of the relationship code may vary across the modules.

Note: The referenced ADLs may include both BADLs (dressing, walking across a room, bathing or showering, eating, getting in or out of bed, and/or using the toilet) and IADLs (preparing hot meals, shopping for groceries, making telephone calls, and/or taking medications), depending on which activities the participant reported receiving help with. If the participant did not report receiving help with any of these BADLs or IADLs, this variable has been assigned a value of "-2".
Note: Since reported helpers were allowed to overlap between BADLs and IADLs, this variable may have a value less than the total number of typified helpers named throughout the ADLs Module (see KX601REA, KX602REA, KX603REA, KX604REA, KX605REA, KX606REA, KX607REA, and KX608REA). If the participant did not provide information on how a helper is related to them (indicated they did not know, refused to answer, or responded in a way that could not be coded into a relationship category), that person was not counted as a unique helper; if the participant did not provide relationship information for any of the people named as helpers, this variable has been assigned a value of "-4". The reference to "entities" in the variable’s name stems from cases where participants decided to discuss (some of) their helpers as a group or entity (e.g. all of the employees who provide care at a nursing home) rather than on an individual basis.
