

High School Activities (1957 Yearbook)

Yearbook Activity Coding

OVERVIEW

The data come from the yearbooks for the 1957 core sample of the Wisconsin Longitudinal Study. Yearbooks were originally obtained for a project that coded the physical attractiveness of the 1957 WLS graduates based on high school yearbook pictures (S. Meland and J. Freese). This project scanned all of the senior pictures with associated activities information, where available. They also scanned all of the remaining pages of the yearbooks, including those describing student activities, and often providing group pictures of participants. All of this information was used in the development of the codes for extra-curricular activities. Ultimately, yearbooks were obtained and coded for approximately 80% of graduates. Activity codings are not available for the sibling sample.

All of a student's activities found in a yearbook were coded. The maximum number of found activities was twenty-seven. Participants' detailed high school activity codes are not available on the public release but variables summarizing the number and types of activities are on the public release. More information on the activity data can be found in COR816 of Appendix G.

These data were first included in WLS version 12.26. An earlier version of these data using variables named yrbook01-yrbook102 has been archived. This version has been updated by re-checking and cleaning of the data and by adding cases that were not available at the time of the previous release.

Note: Schools with yearbooks where activity participation was either listed under the senior photos or listed as part of an index were easy to code. However for some yearbooks, coders relied on group shots of teams and clubs that included the names of the students underneath the photos. Students with yearbooks falling into this category are coded as complex.
